

The blissefull dew of heaven do's arowze you.
 The powerfull Venus, well hath grac'd her Altar,
 And given you your love: Our Master Mars
 Hast vouch'd his Oracle, and to Arcite gave
 The grace of the Contention: So the Deities
 Have shewd due justice: Beare this hence.

Pal. O Cosen,

That we should things desire, which doe cost us
 The losse of our desire; That nought could buy
 Deare love, but losse of deare love.

Thef. Never Fortune

Did play a subtler Game: The conquerd triumphes,
 The victor has the Losse: yet in the passage,
 The gods have beene most equall: Palamon,
 Your kinsman hath confest the right o'th Lady
 Did lye in you, for you first saw her, and Even then proclaimd your fancie: He restord her
 As your stolne Iewel, and desir'd your spirit
 To send him hence forgiven; The gods my justice
 Take from my hand, and they themselves become
 The Executioners: Leade your Lady off,
 And call your Lovers from the stage of death,
 Whom I adopt my Frinds. A day or two
 Let us looke sadly, and give grace unto
 The Funerall of Arcite, in whose end
 The visages of Bridegroomes weele put on
 And smile with Palamon; for whom an houre,
 But one houre since, I was as dearely sorry,
 As glad of Arcite; and am now as glad,
 As for him sorry. O you heavenly Charmers,
 What things you make of us? For what we lacke
 We laugh, for what we have, are sorry still,
 Are children in some kind. Let us be thankfull
 For that which is, and with you leave dispute
 That are above our question: Let's got off,
 And beare us like the time.

Florisb. Exeunt.

Epilogue.

EPILOGUE

I Would now aske ye how ye like t
 But as it is with Schoole Boyes,
 I am cruell fearefull: pray yet stay
 And let me looke upon ye: No m
 Then it goes hard I see; He that h
 Lov'd a yong handsome wench then
 Tis strange if none be heere, and if
 Against his Conscience let him hi
 Our Market: Tis in vaine, I see t
 Have at the worst can come, then;
 And yet mistake me not: I am not
 We have no such cause. If the tale
 (For tis no other) any way conten
 (For to that honest purpose it was
 We have our end; and ye shall ha
 I dare say many a better, to prolon
 Your old loves to us: we, and all
 Rest at your service, Gentlemen,

FINIS.
